Welcome to our February update

- Multiplex were delighted to achieve practical completion of the Clarice Pears School of Health and Wellbeing (formerly Institute of Health & Wellbeing) last month.
- The building will bring together specialists from across a range of disciplines to provide a centre of excellence for policy development and outreach. As such, the building also acts as a gateway into the wider development site.
- We continue to make good progress at the Adam Smith Business School, with the project approximately 75% through the overall programme.
- On-site activities include drainage works on the west & east elevations as well as preparation for the hard landscaping.
- Lighting installation is progressing through levels 2-6 and façade installation continues with our specialist partners, Decomo and Charles Henshaw.

On the Adam Smith Business School:

- The roof work in terms of insulation and weatherproofing is now fully complete.
- Raised access floor installation is progressing throughout the levels, currently up to 5 and 6.
- HV cable has been installed and the building now has power.
- Glazed and movable partitions are also fully complete.

Project Look Ahead

- The Adam Smith Business School will continue to progress internal fit out activities, with associated works planned to be completed in June. Commissioning activities will commence in March as we begin to test installed products and systems prior to handover of the building later this year.

Community Update

- Multiplex were in attendance at multiple careers fairs during the last month.
- It is great to be able to evidence all the various roles and careers within construction and the opportunities to get involved with Multiplex.
- We are always looking to expand our partnerships with local schools, university and colleges.
- Multiplex representatives from the Campus Development site took to the field for the Business Fives tournament.
- Although being knocked out in the semi-finals, both teams played some great football and overall this was a brilliant chance for team building whilst promoting a healthy lifestyle.

Environmental Update

- The project team welcomed representatives from NetRegs, who provide free environmental guidance to businesses in Scotland & Northern Ireland, to the Campus Development site. NetRegs conducted filming and interviews to update their best-practice video series for the construction industry, covering topics such as pollution controls and waste management.
- Following a trial of a waste tool developed by Zero Waste Scotland and Glasgow Caledonian University, our team presented the findings of the trial at an industry launch event. The tool aims to calculate the true cost of waste, beyond the cost of hiring a skip, to include material procurement, labour & transport costs. The aim of the tool is to change the way the industry thinks about waste, with construction accounting for approximately 50% of all waste generated in Scotland.
